At the conclusion of this conference, participants should be able to:

- Describe the clinical and socioeconomic consequences of untreated AF, AF-related stroke, and hospitalization.
- Employ a comprehensive diagnostic strategy, including assessment of stroke and bleeding risk, for patients with AF.
- Determine the risk/benefit profiles of available AADs for a given patient based on efficacy, safety, and patient-specific characteristics.
- Evaluate the available clinical data surrounding favorable AAD/anticoagulant combination strategies for the treatment of AF and prevention of AF-related stroke.
- Develop individualized AF management strategies that incorporate rate, rhythm, anticoagulation, and/or ablation therapies as appropriate.
